> Prequel to:- Are we there yet?

> It seemed just like another normal day at the SGC.You know, a gou'ald dropping in here, an deadly weapon there.

>SG-1 were sitting around the gate room with nothing better to do than, well, sit there. Jack brought out his pack of >cards.  "Anyone know how to play Old Maid?"said Jack taking >the cards out and begining to deal. The other members lookedaround at each other.

> "Don't deal for me, Jack," said Major Carter after afew seconds silence. "It's been a long time since I've >played and I don't think I can remember how. So, I'm out"Sam shrugged and so did Jack.

> "I don't not understand this game either, O'Neill,"announced the Jaffa. "I have never seen these things you >call cards before." Jack looked across the table at the onlyremaining player, Dr. Jackson, and then packed the cards >away. Daniel looked disappointed. "I have an idea," said Sam, looking excited. The >rest of the team all groaned. They knew what was comingnext.

"Why don't we write a computer program to make the >function of the Stargate, well, better?" The rest of the team groaned again. They had seen this coming. Or rather,

>Jack and Daniel had seen this coming and Teal'c was justtrying to fit in.

> "Alright, Carter," said Jack, forcing himself tostand up.

"We'll help you with your stupid little program, >won't we guys?" Teal'c and Daniel both nodded. Only Daniellooked embarrassed at the same time.

> So, everything went according to plan. Sam bootedup the computer. Teal'c stood back and watched. Jack made >sacastic comments and got in the way. Everybody was doingfine.
Well, that is everybody except Daniel. He just stood >there in the corner.  "Oh, shoot!" cursed Sam after a while.
"I've run >out of power. Daniel, I'll need you to go power up theStargate so we can get some more power, clear?"
> "Er... why doesn't Jack do it?" asked Daniel, nowvery embarrassed. So, Sam had nto explain to him in very >techneical terms, which nobody else could understand, toDaniel it was up to him to get the power. After a while, >Daniel got sick of listen and just walked off to boot upthe Stargate anyway.
> Well, we can all guess what happens next, can't we?After about 5 seconds, there was a huge bang.
> "Daniel, what have you been and done now?" yelled Jack across the now smoke filled room.
> "Erm, I think I blow the fuse. What would you sayCarter?"
> "The Stargate had a fuse? Whoa, how big is that!" "What is a fuse?"
> "Yes, the Stargate does have a fuse. Now, a fuseis..."
> "Oh, don't let her explain it. We'll be here allday!"
> "Er, what are we going to do now?" "So, you think you could explain it better then >do you?" "Erm,hello, I am here"
> "Yes, I do for a matter of fact!" "Dr. Jackson is trying to speak."
> "Oh yeah?" "Yeah"
> "What are going to do about all this mess?" I know a perfect line for just this kind of occassion.
>I've been saving it up for just now. ENTER GENERAL HAMMOND!
"What is all this mess? Dr. Jackson, what are you >doing? What's all this noise? Look at the state you peoplehave made my gateroom. I want a full explanation from each >one of you!" The general was just about to flip out. So,Jack went to explain but before he had enough time to open >his mouth... "Never mind. I don't care. You're all dismissedfor the next week. Thanks a lot!" The general stromed out.
>I don't think he was a very happy bunny rabbit.  "Daniel, I thought you said you used to program >computers back in collage?" said a very cross O'Neill. "No, I just put that on my CV to increase my salery"
> "Daniel, you are never going near my computer again!"
